

A National Ocean Student Network

Created by the Education and Public Engagement team at Ocean Networks Canada's Centre for Enterprise and Engagement (ONCCEE) in the summer of 2011, the Ocean Student Society (OSS) exists to serve graduate and undergraduate students from all disciplines who share a passion for the ocean through opportunities in professional development, mentoring and public outreach.

With the knowledge that organizations like this exist at other post-secondary institutions across Canada, ONCCEE extends an invitation to them to form a national ocean student network; a co-ordinated effort that would benefit everyone.

Connecting ocean science students coast to coast to coast, the network could provide them with opportunities to:

- share research problems, results and findings
- collaborate on projects spanning the country
- participate in professional development and mentoring workshops/sessions
- share their passion and knowledge with others through education and outreach initiatives.
- become better informed of ocean science and who is doing it by providing updated information on initiatives from each affiliate

To learn more about the National Ocean Student Network and how to become an affiliate, contact Ellyn Davidson, Post-Secondary Education Developer at ellynd@uvic.ca